If your computer does not start in normal mode (Windows does not start), you need to start it in safe mode to solve the problem. To start safe mode when booting Windows 10, you need to press the F8 key right after you turn on your computer. If you have Windows 8 installed on your computer, you can open a menu of additional Windows 8 boot options. To do this, press the F8 key when you boot your computer and then select the "Safe Mode" option. The computer should then boot into safe mode. However, more often than not, a blue screen of death appears when you go to safe mode. To fix this, you need to create and properly set up a blacklist in Windows 10. Below, we'll look at how to create a blacklist in Windows 10, add apps that Windows 10 considers potentially malicious to it, and use this blacklist in Windows 10. How to enable application blacklisting in Windows 10 Blacklist can be used to block unwanted apps. Windows 10 has a blacklist of apps that Windows thinks may be malicious. To allow the viewing and use of these applications, you need to allow access to the registry. How to use the application blacklist in Windows 10 To use the application blacklist in Windows 10, you need to right-click the "Computer" icon and select "Properties". This will open a window with information about your computer. If there are any unknown applications, there they are in the category "Programs and components". To add to the blacklist, you need to click on the "Add" button. This will open a window with a choice of the type of information you want to block. Select "Other" as the reason for blocking and click "Add". You will see another window where you need to select the application you want to block. There are other ways to perform app locking on iPhone, but they have one common drawback - you will need access to your iCloud account and Apple ID in order to completely lock your device. We recommend using only the method that will allow you to completely prohibit your device from working and performing any actions. If you don't want to use your iCloud account and Apple ID, you can lock your phone
