P.S. Sorry for those of you who were waiting for a review. I got new job and it's making me sleep 12 hours a day. Also there is a lot of cooking in that time. It's not a good time to be reviewing games as well. So I apologize if it took a bit longer than usual. Long days at work, hehe. But you know what they say about quality vs. quantity. I've been playing a lot of co-op lately. My friend Pickedax is extremely impatient. Once he feels bored and has not achieved enough, he decides that there is no more point in trying to complete the game because he's bored. And I've been on the receiving end of that a fair few times already. But the main reason I'm writing this, is that I had an idea which I wanted to write about a while ago, but I didn't feel like it could fit in there. So I'll do it here. In the game "Easthallow", every one of the characters has a mental illness. Do you think that it's a good thing that the game is dealing with mental illness? I personally think that mental illness is a terrible thing. So I don't feel like it's a good thing, but I understand how people can be afraid of talking about it, and how it can be hard to make people think about mental illness. But I think that is part of what the game is trying to do. And I think that fact that it's reaching people in such a way that they don't want to ignore it, makes it worthwhile. That's why I wrote a short review of the game, and what I thought about it. I hope you get something out of it as well. After my experience with the game "Easthallow" where I was able to write a lot of stuff without a review, I feel a bit out of place posting a review now. But I am grateful to my friend Pick a n' Pax for giving me the idea for this write up and it is his game I am writing about today. Although the subject matter is rather grim. It's a really good game. My friend Pick a n' Pax is a total lunatic. If he has had a positive experience with a game, he will talk about it on his blog without the slightest hint of feeling embarrassed or anxious. And if he hasn't, he will talk about

Sunday, October 28, 2009 This blog post is part of Revelanator's Seven Point Portfolio which is a part of the Wealth-Builder Academy. BEFORE: 1. Market is falling. All else equal, the value of all your stocks is likely to go down. 2. Stock market is falling. The value of your stocks will go down. 3. The stock market is falling. If your stocks represent approximately 50% or more of your portfolio, you should leave the stock market alone until you know for sure that the stock market is over-valued, or has hit bottom. POST: 1. Market is falling. The value of your stocks has already gone down. You would have already done this at Point #2. 2. Stock market is rising. With many areas of the stock market, you can sell now and get a good price. However, there are a few areas where your stocks are down-weighted and the price could possibly be lower later. 3. The stock market is falling. All else equal, you should sell some of your stocks now, and buy others tomorrow. Or you should put everything into cash and watch the rate at which it comes back to you. Hope this post helps! Wishing you great success as you move your portfolio forward.

From the Wikipedia entry: In Dota 2 the four heroes selected for each game act as a team (sometimes known as the "core heroes"). Each player is able to pick one "core hero" and a maximum of two of the other three, depending on mana. The goal of the game is to destroy the enemy's ancient while protecting your own. Because of the focus on the core heroes, the importance of the other three heroes is reduced and it is possible to have a very different game from one with many carry heroes to one with a very low amount of carry heroes.
