Leadership is a necessary precursor to management. By definition, leadership means to guide or conduct and not merely to administrate or run. However, in today's world, leadership has become so complex that it is often thought of only in terms of administration. Management is the process of getting people to work together and taking care of what they produce. Leadership is knowing what direction we want to take the group in order to get them to work well together. It is the art of guiding the group to a specific future state. In my experience, all great leaders start by building relationships and developing trust with the group. A leader who ignores this is telling a story of a rose bush that will bloom into a beautiful garden. By providing a sound foundation upon which the entire group will grow, a leader will be able to measure the depth of that trust. If that trust is faulty and the leader does not find a way to repair it, they will be unable to lead effectively.Q: How to interpret the cv2.imshow() method? cv2.imshow() is used in the sample code below to display the same image.
