Elder Scrolls Online is a free-to-play massively multiplayer online role-playing game developed by Bethesda Game Studios, and published by ZeniMax Online Entertainment. The game features an open world and character progression from level 1 to 100 with a deeply persistent in-game world for players to experience new stories, side quests, adventure zones, PvP combat, and online role-playing games. Players are able to experience the story of Tamriel from a new perspective, by assuming control of a new character in the Tamriel-Forgotten Realms, with a focus on character advancement, skill based combat, and an expansion of customization. "We've added this particular firearm to our ban list and it is now banned from Texas. If an individual tries to bring the firearm into Texas it will be confiscated and the individual will be prosecuted," Rick Beswick, the governor of the Lone Star State, said, during a news conference Wednesday. In a statement, Dallas-Fort Worth National Airport Police Detective Sgt. Thomas Eakins said: "Individuals from out of state who buy firearms from a Texas distributor usually don't have to submit to the training. We are working to detect those out-of-state purchases and determine who is selling the firearms." Eakins added, "We are also working with other agencies to identify and prosecute illegal firearm dealers." Read more at News.Yahoo.com. At first blush, it felt somewhat disingenuous. I am a fairly savvy business person. I have found out pretty quickly that it would be wise to play ball, and when it is not. If you're a Samsung Galaxy S9 owner in Germany, you may be recieving a software update today that focuses on the display, as spotted by our friends at Android Police. The update isn't all that exciting (it's just a new version of the Camera app), but it's a pretty major one nonetheless. Until now, the gallery in the S9 included Google's own decision as to how to display certain photos — such as their filters — so if you liked the way the standard version of the Galaxy S9's camera app processed your photos, well, you're still stuck with it. Naturally, if you'd like a refresher, you're now in the situation to see what we mean. Thankfully, though, this latest firmware upgrade isn't quite so stingy with information when it comes to the camera's processing. Depending on your device, the update can bring up to 10 extra options in the "Edit" menu of the Gallery app, including options for the way you view images, as well as the number of images that you can store on your phone at one time. It's unclear how these have all changed if that wasn't already the case before, but we'll assume that plenty has. Obviously, everyone should be testing these settings for themselves for the simple reason of making sure that they're not causing any more problems than they need to. We've reached

REVIEWS ELDEN RING game: Q: Do I need to upgrade custom-discovery-service-smarthost for Azure AD B2C? I am in the process of upgrading our OpenID Connect SPA for AAD B2C to have users login with a UWP app. We are running a single-tenant on-premise instance of Active Directory so the tenant name is important. When the B2C client login screen shows, it connects to which appears to be a custom-discovery-service-smarthost endpoint. Then, when the SPAs begins the authorization with the B2C client, it appears to connect to I have verified that the custom-discovery-service-smarthost endpoint is published for the tenant (because I updated the Windows Server image using Ansible to point to it, then I restarted the B2C service). I have verified that the SPAs connect using the ADAL-JWT flows to the AAD B2C client when the user lands on a page that uses the B2C JWT flow. Is there any reason I cannot just remove the endpoint for my custom discovery service smarthost, and just use the default endpoint defined by the Windows Azure Active Directory B2C client? A: From the doc for the discovery service smarthost endpoint, the requirements are DiscoveryEndpoint is a unique value specifying your organization's discovery service smarthost endpoint. If you change your organization's DiscoveryEndpoint, you must also update the DiscoveryServerCertificate element. So you can't change the DiscoveryEndpoint but you must update the DiscoveryServerCertificate element as bff6bb2d33

Tue, 11 Oct 2016 07:25:07 +0000 Plus: Head to Mars and Do Good With Free Games

For an October with not much going on in Vegas, PlayStation Live was quite the event. From from live shows with AI, to new members, to live performances, Live provided a spectacular party for the PlayStation community on more than one occasion.

But, while the events were fun and exciting, at PlayStation's table during CES we were actually working alongside our friends at the Entertainment Software Association to draft some info on Steam. Not only were we bugging PlayStation users to drink from our virtual hydration bottles, but we were also representing a $49 value of memberships for PlayStation Plus!

Have you signed up for PlayStation Plus yet? Head on over to the PlayStation Plus area of Gamestop or Bestbuy Nintendo PlayStation to get in on the action!

In addition to that, we are now offering exclusive, free games for PlayStation Plus members each month. This month's games are Mars: War Logs and Happy Days — both out now on PSN and available for download starting now.

I understand that if I have a linear regression problem, then, the optimum $\hat{\beta}$ is found by solving the Lagrangian: $$ \ell(\beta) + \lambda\left(\sum_i \epsilon_i \right) $$ But how can I find the optimal λ? If I impose the constraint $\sum_i \beta_i=0$, then the problem reduces to: $$ \ell(\beta) + \lambda\left(\sum_i \epsilon_i \right) $$ Suppose that I have $\lambda_1 = \ldots \lambda_n = \lambda$ and $w_1,\ldots, w_n$ weights on the linear constraints. The first order condition then becomes: $$ \sum_i \lambda \epsilon_i + \sum_{i,j} w_i \beta_i \epsilon_j + \sum_i w_i \lambda \epsilon_i = 0 \implies \sum_{i,j} w_i \beta_i \epsilon_j = -\lambda\sum_i \epsilon_i. $$ Thus, the optimal λ is given by $$ \lambda = -\sum_i \epsilon_i/\sum_j \beta_j^2. $$ However, if I let $\beta_j = 0$, then I get $\lambda = 0$. So, my question is: Is the optimal λ necessarily equal to 0 in this case (regardless of the weights) (why not) If not, what is the appropriate formula in this case (Note: I would like to go from the first order condition to the optimal λ, as I cannot find the Lagrangian directly) A: Yes, there is no unique value for $\$
