New Jersey residents whose subscriptions to the New Jersey Star-Ledger newspaper are expiring this month will have to shell out more than $1.50 a week to continue reading, if they don't want to forego their daily dose of The Star-Ledger. Update: We've looked into this, and there is a dearth of evidence that suggests that this is true. There is, however, some evidence that suggests that the change has a partisan motive — one that might affect the way members of both parties read the paper. But the evidence does not support a conspiracy between political parties, state or federal. Read the full post ... A bill that would drastically increase the fees charged New Jersey residents by the Star-Ledger and the Garden State News, two other daily newspapers and the weekly current events magazines New Jersey Monthly and New Jersey On New Jersey, passed the state Senate on Thursday by a 25-6 vote, with the single dissenting vote of Sen. Joseph Vitale (D-Bergen). The bill, which would hike the fees to the newspapers and magazines by raising the rates on newspapers of 250,000 circulation to $1.80 a week, and magazines to $1.50 a week, and raise the rates for the rest of the newspapers and magazines to $1.10 a week, was introduced by state Sens. Steve Sweeney (D-Gloucester), Robert Singer (D-Ocean)
