Designed by I.M. Pei in 1964, the building is a major example of modernist architecture in America, and serves as a central community space to Cornell students, faculty, and staff. Dr. King was a major American civil rights leader who was assassinated in 1968. The campus chapel was modeled on Saint Peter's Basilica in Rome. The building is one of the largest freestanding churches in the United States, with seating for 1,750 people. "We felt that the city of Ithaca, the College at Cornell and the University at Cornell should do everything possible to commemorate the man who made it all possible," said Isaac G. Jerome, who was the first African American to hold the title of Cornell University Chief of Staff. The chapel will turn 50 on February 8. Cornell students celebrate every February 8th in honor of Dr. King's birthday. "As the elders, the leaders, we take time, at the end of our days to reflect on our days," said Jesuit priest Dr. Gerald Vizenor, Cornell University's Reverend of the Chapel. "It's the kind of gift that we hope will be appreciated by Dr. King when he's no longer here in a more noble way than when he was here." Cornell University plans on hosting a celebration for Dr. King, including a major concert, in the coming weeks. Dr. Vizenor said Dr. King would have loved this moment in his life. "It's one of the quintessential moments in the life of the
