Among them were officers from the Harvard commandant's staff: Francis William Sergeant, Class of 1867 (who would become a colonel and the first Chief Signal Officer of the United States Army); Frank H. Chase, Class of 1870 (who would later serve as an assistant clerk of the Senate and as a justice of the United States Supreme Court); George H. Miller, Class of 1873 (who would become adjutant general of the Massachusetts National Guard); George C. Thomas, Class of 1872 (who would become a general in the War Department); and their classmate Arthur P. Tufts, Class of 1876. If any of these students might be suspected of having taken on more than their fair share of cigars, it would be Chase, whose account in the 1876 edition of The Class Book of Harvard School Compasses makes his excess obvious: "It is made up of Eau de Cologne, Zephyr, and other odoriferous perfumes, and is known to the young ladies of Massachusetts as 'George's Hair Powder.'" But the substance of the cologne is in constant flux; by 1876, it had become something much closer to "George's Hair Salve." [Time-course and gender aspects of immune reaction in patients with allergic rhinitis and chronic obstructive pulmonary disease]. The purpose of the study was to evaluate time-course of immune reaction in patients with nasal allergy and chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD) in comparison with healthy volunteers. The study included ten (5 women and 5 men) patients with nasal allergy and ten (5 women and 5 men) with COPD. The index of cellular immune response was characterized by the excretion of alpha-1-antitrypsin in urine. The data obtained demonstrate a decrease in the activity of cellular immune response in patients with both nasal allergy and COPD compared to healthy volunteers (the mean values of alpha-1-antitrypsin were 35.6 +/- 7.7 mc

Another Wiko's Firmware : Erlang Erlang.io vs RabbitMQ Is RabbitMQ a good message broker for web application? I am new to Erlang, and we have two groups developing a web application. One of the groups has proposed using Erlang's erlware.io as a message broker. I am not sure if I'm understanding that correctly: Does erlware.io only work with Erlang's native protocols, or is it applicable for messages sent via external protocols like web services? If it only works with Erlang's native protocols, then am I correct in assuming that if we are using RabbitMQ for message delivery, RabbitMQ is also using Erlang's native protocols? A: RabbitMQ is a message broker, not a message queue. RabbitMQ is, as the name suggests, something that brokers messages. As such you have to pick at least an Erlang application to use it. You are correct that it is using Erlang's native protocols. A: I didn't look at erlware.io, but I did look at RabbitMQ. In the RabbitMQ documentation it says RabbitMQ is a messaging server (another thing than a message broker) "This server can be used to send and receive 'message packets' between processes that are running on different machines. This can be a very efficient way of distributing a job, since the server handles both the message routing (cross-machine communication) and the transport (actual transmission of the messages)." That means you are using TCP (or HTTP if you use the REST interface) for sending messages to RabbitMQ. RabbitMQ is running on one or more servers and these servers are used for storing your messages. Q: A question on the character of a k -algebra Let R be an integral domain and k be a commutative R -algebra. If k is an integral domain, then the character of k is a morphism of R -algebras. However, if k is a k -algebra, then the character of k is a morphism of k -algebr 6d1f23a050
