A region covered by a service provided by an operator is referred to as an "enclave," and "enclave" is a service provided only in a specific area. Since the operator can provide a service only to a specific area, user experiences may be improved and thus an enterprise value of an operator may be increased. When a user is in an enclave, the user may select various services and thus may have a more desirable experience. In particular, the user may desire to move to a place, which is adjacent to a service point, while the user is in the enclave.INTRODUCTION ============ Since the first reports of laparoscopic hysterectomy in the early 1990s, a large number of articles have been written about the procedure. In the vast majority of the literature, laparoscopic procedures were described in patients with benign conditions. However, with
