Download Ashes Cricket 2009 Full Version Highly Compressed Movie

This is an incredible Cricket game with all the famous real players and real stadiums. In this way you can even simulate the magic of real cricket! If you like to play cricket, this is an excellent download game! There's no doubt Ashes Cricket 2009 is a worthy addition to the latest Sony console lineup, though the consumer game group's emphasis on online modes results in a problematic version of the sport. As with most online-enabled titles, the real-time multiplayer is a mixed bag: while it's simple to access and play, setting up matches to your liking is a bit of a headache. Players must register before being allowed to join, and they're met with a login screen where they must input their log-in details. If you have any sort of mobile broadband connection you'll be good to go, but if you're reliant on a dial-up or payphone, then we recommend using the Sony Wi-Fi Connection or the PlayStation 2's autodial server, which is free for registered users. Unlike Wi-Fi Connection, the autodial isn't compatible with the PlayStation 3's wireless LAN adapter, so if you have that option, you'll have to rely on PlayStation 2's wired LAN or connect to the Internet via a modem.

Once you're logged in, the PlayStation 2's game session data is cached, so even if you do lose your connection or your

PlayStation 2 switches to sleep mode, you should be able to join games easily.

The fantastic cricket commentator who serves as the game's narrator

Brian Lara is a well-known and popular figure in the real-life game, but he sounds flat and unrealistic. Lara also spends too much time reading a script that's provided to him, and he says some painfully bad lines, like "Oh my God, I'm so tired my lips are so dry" when he gets a big six. Thankfully the voice acting of the commentators — Steve Waugh, Michael Slater, Shane Warne, and Andy Roberts — are much better. They deliver their lines more naturally, though there's no filter, so if you're not a cricket fan you'll hear a lot of curse words. In real life Australian commentator Ray Robinson and England's John Fleming present the majority of the commentary, and they offer a fine combination of on-field banter and updates on the action.
