this is not to say, however, that the armed struggle has no support within the tamil diaspora. far from it. it is opposed by the majority of the tamil community. these are diaspora tamils who have shared with their counterparts in sri lanka a patriotic or perhaps more accurately, a religious attachment to their motherland and are currently in exile. bose's mission was to spread his message to europe, india, china, and africa. it was the speech, the music, the light, the flag, the uniforms and the total conviction that united the ina soldiers. the ina, under the theme, mein kampf, not only had a direct effect in sparking off the anti-british struggle in india, which eventually grew into a well coordinated movement, but it also influenced hitler's political formation and ideology. the effect of the mein kampf on bose has never been discussed. but we are convinced that his ideas have enriched hitler's party ideology. (emphasis mine) how was national consciousness among the minorities to be aroused? what were the channels through which the sentiments of their people could be channelled? were their people prepared for a revolutionary solution to the existing set of problems? members of the course were among the first to be mobilised for resistance. some, like a. ambatiyar and p. pambigal, were to play prominent roles in the ina struggle. but s. v. chidambaram, a. manickam, m. k. prakasan, v. rangarajan, m. ramachandran, d. e. r. lakshmanan, m. rajagopalan, t. kesavamoorthy, and others at various stages in their lives were to demonstrate an abiding commitment to the cause.

once the concrete road to jaffna had been completed, rjaratnam went to the district office and asked for permission to construct roads and bridges to link the towns of mullaitivu and mannar within the district, having pointed out that this was the only way of restoring communications between them. this was granted, and as a result, the population within the district increased. however, the movement of military resources to this southern quarter was somewhat impeded by the security situation within the jaffna district. the ltte had strengthened its fighters in the jaffna peninsula with the introduction of new cadres and weapons by burmese sympathisers. this resulted in an acute security situation inside the district. though the ltte had political bases in jaffna district, they retained their link with the pirapakkam camp. the armed resistance had to be maintained within the confines of jaffna peninsula to protect the organisation. [xiv] to provide for such hard-pressed security needs of the ltte, some areas of jaffna district were demilitarized and declared 'no-go' areas. this area was only accessible by way of the formal offices of the district, which were in mullaitivu.

because of the isolation, the movement of military supplies was difficult. this hampered the movement of military equipment to the south-east. rjaratnam was a leader of the office staff.

he was sent by the office staff to mullaitivu, where he found that his work was useful. he had been selected for that purpose. so he could be trusted. he was able to bring in military supplies for safe passage. 5ec8ef588b
