I looked at the instruction manual, and it seems like it's for more advanced users, so I can't really help much. It would be very appreciated if someone could help me. I'm not sure where the Vancouver people who have lived here for many years are now, but I don't think "old Vancouver" is still here. If anything, this is young Vancouver (maybe a bit of middle Vancouver too, but not the whole city). I grew up in Vancouver and lived in the east side of the city for almost 25 years (including the first ten years of my marriage). It wasn't until I moved to San Francisco that I realized that the east side isn't old Vancouver. It's what young Vancouver looks like. I would say that living and working in San Francisco for years has made me more aware of how young and vibrant the west side of Vancouver is. It's true that this is a bit of young Vancouver. That is because the '99 flood covered over a large section of downtown, but I still believe it is part of this city. Also, I live in the West End (Vanier), and it is one of the more vibrant areas of the city. Right now, I would say this is a city of neighborhoods, but with a huge influence from the East. Everyone has their own opinion. I live in a downtown Vancouver neighborhood in a condo building. A couple years ago, I started seeing a lot of day laborers. They tend to gather on our street. For whatever reason, it seems like the east side is where they go to find work. When I see them, I always wonder why they are in my neighborhood, but that's life I guess. It's been a pretty easy sell so far. I agree that West End and Vanier are important neighborhoods. But I also think downtown has a way to go in terms of providing a sense of belonging to the community. Right now, I would say this is a city of neighborhoods, but with a huge influence from the East.
